GIRL FOILS SUITOR BY SLIDING ROPE

Miss Tess Escapes William Golden, Who Cuts His Arms Breaking Through Glass Door to Reach Her.

SEES AMBULANCE, FAINTS.

She Drops In Front of Pulltzer Building as Vehicle Hurries to Get Un welcome Lover She Left Behind in Office Building.

After sliding down a rope to escape om a rejected lover pretty Christina Tess fainted in the street in front of the

As she was being carried into Perry's drug store an ambulance passed on its way to get William Golden, the young man from whom she had fled. He had out his hands and arms in battering in the glass door that separated him from

The young woman worked at No. 25 Beekman street for B. A. Klssam, and it was there the trouble occurred. Golden worked across the street, and is several years older than Miss Tess. He met her first in a business way and then became a frequent caller at the home of her grandmother, with whom she lived, at No. 203 Pennsylvania avenue, Brooklyn.
The grandmother objected to the young man's attentions, thinking that Miss Tess was too young to be married, as he wished. She asked the young woman to break with him, and she sent him a note saying that she could not see him any more.

Golden went to Kissam's shortly ba-fore 5 yeserday afternoon. The girl was working on the fifth floor, which shut off from the rest of the building by a glass door at the foot of the stairs. Robert Davison, son of the manager, refused Golden admittance and bolted the door. Miss Tess had heard the angry words between the men and was frightened. Golden threw his weight against the door but it would not give, and he began to beat out the glass with his right fist and forced himself through the opening.

There is a well from the fifth to the There is a well from the fifth to the fourth floor in the building, and a rope suspended from a pulley was hanging in it. When Miss Tess heard Golden break through she ran to the well and siid down the rope to the next floor. Running wildly into the street she flared not look behind her. In front of the Pulitzer Building she saw an ambulance racing toward Beekman street and straightway fainted. She was carried into the drug store until another ambulance took her to the Hudson Street Hospital. She was suffering from hysterial.

ing him. Fired Into Crowd.

This occurred at Tenth and Liberty streets in this city. The crowd at first consisted of no more than a score of men and women. Exasperated at their remarks Willingmeyer fired his gun at them and half a dozen were struck by big shot. The most seriously hurt were Mrs. Loutowski, of No. 1019 South Tenth street; Miss Zochistie, of No. 1270 Mechanic street, and a boy.

The shooting attracted a great crowd and several hundred persons were ston following the man and his dog. Willingmeyer kept them back at the point of his gun, and when they came too near he again fired at their legs. Half a dozen more were injured and the man ran into a swamp.

At every step he went into the mire half way to his knees, but he at last reached an old wagon that had been stranded almost in the middle. With this as a fortress he resisted every effort of the police to bring him out.

Fores were built around the swamp and a large squad of extra policemen were called to watch. From his point of vantage Willingmeyer could have easily killed many policemen had they tried to go in for him and they decided to starve him out. But during the night he eluded their watchfulness and made his way to the railroad, boarding a freight train bound to New York.
